I am a recent XM subscriber, and am completely satisfied with the manner in which my product is handled. Today's "normal" broadcasting is full of too much advertising and DJ talk, and the number of stations available has increased so much that one cannot keep the same station tuned in. Range is down as well as programming quality. XM, as well as other satellite competitors, allows me to travel without worrying about losing my programming. The low advertising level also allows me to enjoy what I choose with no interruption. It would seem most appropriate that government agencies have MUCH more important issues to attack than this.
